IMCAs and the MCA

The Mental Capacity Act (MCA) is legislation about supporting and protecting vulnerable people who are unable to make their own decisions.

The Independent Mental Capacity Advocate (IMCA) will make sure that people are as involved as possible in important decisions and that these are in their best interests.

How to engage an IMCA

You can refer for an IMCA if the person is:

- Facing decisions about change of accommodation, serious medical treatment or are subject to Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS) and:
- Assessed as lacking capacity to make these decisions, and;
- Has no appropriate family or friends to consult

The statutory authorities (Leeds City Council or NHS services in Leeds) have a duty to instruct an IMCA if the criteria above are met.

The statutory authorities may also involve an IMCA in safeguarding cases and some care reviews when the person is assessed to lack capacity.

IMCAs also support people who are under Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS) to make sure that any decisions made are the least restrictive possible.

What an IMCA can do

What an IMCA can do

- Work with decision-makers to get the best outcome
- Find out the person's wishes, feelings, values and beliefs in private
- Represent the person
- Access relevant health and social care records
- Challenge the decision on behalf of a person if necessary
- Seek a second medical opinion where appropriate
- Submit a report
- Ensure that any decisions made on a person's behalf are made in that person's best interests

What an IMCA can't do

- IMCAs do not assess a person's capacity; this is the responsibility of the decision maker
- Make the decision on behalf of the person who lacks capacity
- Make a decision on behalf of the decision maker
- IMCAs do not provide continuing advocacy support when the decision making process is completed
- IMCA is not an emergency service; you do not have to instruct an IMCA in an emergency
